

Andy, an IT expert, was looking to change career to a business coach. His key goal was to start looking more professional.

A colour, style and shopping consultation helped him to see what suited him and yet fit in with his relaxed and friendly personality. In his new clothes he automatically changed his body language due to his confidence and self esteem.

Simon was looking to improve his style. His goal was to be more confident and to have a greater presence in his new job.

A colour and style consultation helped him to know what to look for and what to avoid when shopping. The wardrobe personality session helped to understand how to bring out his true self.